FISH THOUGHTS BY SCOTT AUDETTE

Just Keep Swimming. It's a great mantra from our friend Dory, one to live life by. But in this case, it might just stop a zombie mermaid from eating your brain.

"A Siren's Peril" is a collaboration between myself and makeup artist Stephanie Paul. What started as Steph mentioning how it could be fun turned into this full-blown exhibit. We were fortunate enough to find 10 fishtastic merfolk to help, and the rest is what you see on the walls tonight. Thanks, Steph, for all your work on this!

A big thank-you goes out to my wife Jennifer for becoming my No. 1 underwater photo assistant and of course to all of the sponsors who believe in what I do and made tonight possible.

And, lastly, a GIGANTIC THANK YOU TO Ali Kirby & ART/ifact for offering to host my FIRST EVER non sports-related retrospective.
